How To Use This Journal

The first 12 weeks postpartum (the 'fourth trimester') are when your pelvic floor is most plastic — and when honest tracking changes outcomes. This journal is built to give you data, not pressure.

1. Each evening, fill in one DAILY page. Rate symptoms 0 (none) - 5 (severe). Log your Kegel sets, even if only one set today.
2. At the end of each week, complete the WEEKLY REVIEW. Watch leakage and pain trend down over time.
3. Every 3 weeks, complete the PELVIC PT VISIT PREP page before your appointment. Bring this book.
4. Don't push: if symptoms worsen (heavy bleeding, fever, foul-smelling discharge, increasing prolapse), call your provider that day.

This is a personal recovery journal, not medical advice. Always discuss symptoms and exercises with a qualified pelvic-floor physical therapist or your OB.

Recovery Milestones (Typical)

Every body is different — these are common ranges, not deadlines.

Week 1-2

- Bleeding (lochia) heavy then tapering. Use pads, not tampons.
- Perineum / incision tender. Ice + sitz baths help.
- Gentle diaphragmatic breathing only. No Kegels yet if it hurts.

Week 3-6

- Lochia transitions to brown then yellow-white.
- Begin gentle Kegels: 5-second holds, 5 reps, 2-3x/day.
- Walking is your friend. No running, lifting, or sit-ups.

Week 6 Check-Up

- OB clears (or doesn't clear) you for exercise and intercourse.
- ASK for a pelvic-floor PT referral - it is the standard of care.
- Diastasis recti and prolapse should be checked at this visit.

Week 7-12

- Pelvic PT typically begins. Internal exam may guide your program.
- Build Kegels: 10-second holds, 10 reps, 3x/day. Add quick flicks.
- Re-introduce core: bird-dog, dead-bug, glute bridges.

Beyond 12 Weeks

- Most leakage and pain should be improving. Plateau? Get assessed.
- Return to running typically week 12+ with PT clearance.
- Heavy lifting and high-impact: ease in, not all-or-nothing.

Kegel & Symptom Reference

A quick reference - use these terms in your daily and weekly logs.

How to Find Your Pelvic Floor

Imagine stopping the flow of urine and stopping passing gas at the same time. That gentle inward-and-upward squeeze is your pelvic floor. Don't clench buttocks, abs, or thighs. Don't hold your breath. Do not practice on the toilet.

Kegel Types

Long hold: squeeze 5-10 sec, fully relax 10 sec - Quick flick: squeeze + release, 1 second each - Functional: squeeze before you cough, sneeze, lift, stand

Leakage

Stress: leak with cough / sneeze / laugh / lift - Urge: sudden need, can't make it - Mixed: both stress + urge

Prolapse Sensations

Heaviness or bulge in vagina / pelvis - 'Tampon falling out' feeling - Worse at end of day or with standing

Pain to Track

Perineum / episiotomy site - C-section incision - Tailbone / coccyx - Pubic bone (symphysis) - Pain with sex (after week 6 clearance)

Red Flags - Call Your Provider

Soaking a pad in 1 hour - Fever > 100.4 F (38 C) - Foul-smelling discharge - Calf pain or shortness of breath - Worsening prolapse symptoms

Baseline Assessment

Fill this in once, on Day 1. Compare in 12 weeks.

Strong, Slow, and Steady

Twelve weeks of tracking is real, valuable data - about you, by you.

Look back through the pages. What patterns surprised you? Which weeks felt strongest? Which exercises moved the needle most?

Bring this book to your next pelvic-PT appointment. You have evidence, not guesswork, to guide your next steps.

Recovery is not a deadline. It's a direction.
